Contract Cities May Pay More for Police Services

March 1 Deadline for Purge of Voter Rolls

CHANCE supervisors have heard the hearing to increase the contract for the Sheriff's Department. They find the plan to be 30 such cities uncontract for this service, but separate fees for service its city council is necessary. The contract is come up for renewal.

tained by Los Angeles County Hospital physicians during the past three years to fund 723 research projects. The information was provided to me by Alex A. Rogers, chairman of the Los Angeles County Hospital Advisory Commission. Rogers' report had been requested by the Board of Supervisors.

Rogers denied that hospital doctors had taken time away from the treatment of county hospital patients to engage in research projects. He stated that county physicians "spent more time caring for patients than they were paid to do, and the time they spent on research was their own."

Money for the research projects was obtained from federal sources, private foundations, and nonprofit health organizations. The county provided no funds for research, Rogers said. Rogers informed me that the Hospital Advisory Commission endorsed the desire of the medical staff to continue research and "strongly recommended that the Board of Supervisors encourage such research."

Los Angeles County voters have until March 1 to return the double post card sent to them to reinstate registration if they did not vote in November. Some 500,000 eligible voters did not vote in the general election.

According to the election code, these non-voters are removed from the registration rolls unless they return the card stating they reside at the same address, according to Ray E. Lee, registrar-recorder.

COUNTY Chief Administrative Office has proposed an approximately 23 per cent hike in the charges, backed by supporting opinions from the County Counsel. The Board of Supervisors will consider the proposal and on at the March 11 hearing.

While I intend to hold off any specific decision until after the hearing, I believe my general position should be made clear. Each contract city should be willing to pay for the type of service it gets, down to the last cent. At the same time, it should not pay more than its fair share.

UNLESS supervisors insist that the participating cities pay their own way, the burden would fall on independent cities which operate their own police departments, and that, too, would not be fair. I will be anxious to hear from both the contract cities and representatives of independent cities at this hearing. And, one thing is certain—my vote will go for the fee structure which is fair to both types of cities. Cities availing themselves of the Sheriff's Department through contract arrangements should pay for what they get—no more and no less.
